

REVIEW of JANE EYRE

Jane Eyre was written by Charlotte Brontë and published in 1847. The originally version is in English. The novel takes place in English countryside. Jane has a strong character; she's rational, passionate and very devout to the religion.

The story is about an orphan who lives with the Reeds. No one wanted her company so she was sent to Lowood School where she met Helen, a friend who later died of typhus. Although Jane had a job there, she decided to change job. So she went to Thornfield as a governess, but there she fell in love with the owner, Mr Rochester. He finally asked her hand and Jane accepted, but she discovered his dark past. After this revelation, despite loving him, she ran away from Thornfield. St John's Rivers admitted Jane to Moor House, after she had wandered for days. Here Jane worked for John and then in a school, but later arrived a letter that will change their life.

I think the plot is intriguing and captivating. The way Charlotte writes is uncommon. Sentences are well connected to each other and she creates an interesting atmosphere.

I recommend this book to women who like love stories, even if some parts are boring and old fashioned.

Dear Diary,

I'm writing to tell you about the time I'm spending out here (with the word "here" I mean anywhere 'cause unfortunately I don't know where I am). Let's see the place around here: open spaces, no houses, a big wood... Maybe I'm still going to wonder for days and perhaps I'm going to die... Fine... But, it doesn't matter. No no no, wait.. Actually, I'd like to be at Thornfield Hall now, in front of that loving fireplace, oh how much I loved it.. stop it, Jane! It belongs to the past.. and with it also the fascinating Mr Rochester (oh God bless him and forgive his mistakes!). I wasn't brave enough to tell him the bad things I thought and maybe he has to thank God for this. Probably I would have killed him.. Oh please heart.. you know I could have never done it. I love him too much to hurt him, even if he hurt me. Involuntarily, but he did it. Mmm, I've just found a nice roost in this wood so I can get some sleep.. Tonight I'll pray God to save me.. I hardly hope He's listening to me somewhere up there..

Good night, Diary

Write you soon

Your Jane
