

JANE EYRE : REVIEW

“Jane Eyre” was written by Charlotte Bronte in 1847. The story is set in England in 1820 and it’s about a love story.

The protagonist is Jane Eyre. She lived at her aunt's until she was sent to an orphanage, and there she made friends with a girl but unfortunately then she died of typhus fever. Ten years later she decided to leave the orphanage to go to work in a rich family as a governess. There she fell in love with Mr. Rochester a rich but mysterious gentleman and they decided to get married. Although he really loved her, Jane discovered something about him that compromised their future.

Jane is a simple and modest girl, who doesn’t really deserve the bad things that happened to her. Her story is interesting and compelling and the reader continues reading to know if Jane at the end finds happiness.

We suggest this book to those who love romantic stories.

ANSWERS:

1. When my aunt decided to send me to an orphanage, I felt abandoned, I didn't know which difficulties I had to deal with and everyone considered me a liar. I felt last and I wished to discover it was only a nightmare.
2. Well, honestly I didn't like him, I didn't think he was good looking and I thought he was certainly a strange man, not very friendly, mysterious and a cold person. But then things changed, as you know, I fell in love and he became the right person for me.
3. We were about to get married but I made a discovery, which would sound terrible for every woman in the world: he was already married! He was married with a mad woman and he had been keeping this secretly from everyone but mostly from me. He has not true with me whereas I was always sincere. Sincerity is one of the most important things in mu opinion so as I have been honest I'd like him to honest too.
4. It broken my heart! I couldn't believe it and when I realised it was true I couldn't believe how naive I had been. I felt cheated and I thought he was only a liar. I was very sad. I can't say how much I cried. I made a decision, maybe it was rash but I thought it was the only thing to do: I escaped. I took a carriage and then I walked and walked until I finally found a house in which people very kind lived. They welcomed me and gave me hospitality.
5. I heard a sign which made me understand how much I loved him and that I couldn't live for away from him. A evening I heard his voice calling out my name even if this wasn't possible because we were too distant. I had thought at him every day without knowing what to do, after that evening there was no doubt: I needed to return to him.
6. I'm a simple girl but I'm strong and determined. Whit these qualities I can became who ever I wanted: an independent woman with a beautiful family. I have had the strength to yet over the bad situation which I have had to deal with and now I'm very self-confident
7. Now I'm happy. When I found Mr. Rochester he had became blind, and had lost the use of a hand because of a terrible accident in his house. But then he slowly began to see with one eye. And when our first son was born he could see him clearly. So now I have a beautiful family and the things past remain in the past.
